Subject of Review: This report explores the recent performance of U.S. agricultural exports to Colombia market, with emphasis on leading product categories that show opportunities for further export expansion. Increasing income, an expanding middle class, and dietary changes have led to greater demand for the types of agricultural products imported from the United States. These products include not only bulk commodities such as grain and meat but also less traditional imports such as packaged food, fuel ethanol, and convenience-store items. This process has been facilitated by the Colombia-U.S. Trade Promotion Agreement (TPA), allowing for substantial gains in the market share of U.S. agricultural suppliers. Restoration of economic growth in Colombia in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic is fundamental to achieving the market opportunities that showed promise to Colombia's foreign and domestic agricultural suppliers prior to the pandemic.

Purpose of Review: The purpose of the review is to ensure the high-quality of the economic analysis, transparent explanation of methods, objective interpretation of results, and effective communication to the intended audience.
